MISSOULA--

Six University of Montana alumni will receive recognition at Homecoming this year for their outstanding records and service to the University and their community. The Distinguished Alumnus Award will be presented Oct. 13 to William Andrews, Helena; Andrew Cogswell, Missoula; David Collier, Grand Blanc, Mich., and Martha Dunlap Moore, Chicago. The Young Alumnus Award, designed to give recognition to young alumni for their accomplishments, will be awarded to Janet Trask Cox, Billings, and Randall Moy, Helena.

The awards are granted to alumni and former students who have served the University, state or nation in a distinguished manner and have brought honor to the University and themselves.

Andrews, who graduated in business administration in 1939, is president of Northwestern Bank of Helena. He has served as president of the Alumni Board and a trustee of the UM Foundation and is a member of the President's Council at Carroll College in Helena. In 1969 he was selected as the Jaycee Boss-of-the-Year and is past director of the Helena Chamber of Commerce. He will serve as vice-president of the UM Foundation in the coming year.

Cogswell has served the University since his graduation in journalism in 1927. He taught at UM for 15 years, was director of the UM Public Service Division from 1946 to 1955 and was Dean of Students from 1955 to 1969. He also worked in the Alumni Association as secretary-treasurer for 10 years. The Alumni Association still uses much of the groundwork that Cogswell laid in setting up the 13 Montana districts comprising the House of Delegates and the organization of state chapters. Last year he worked on the Homecoming committee for the class of '27.

Collier received a B.A. in 1956 from UM and an M.A. in 1957 from Harvard in business administration. In 1965 he joined General Motors of Canada as assistant comptroller and became director of product programs for General Motors of Detroit in 1968. He has worked in General Motors as general assistant treasurer, treasurer and president of General Motors of Canada. He is presently vice-president of General Motors--the second youngest vice-president in GM's history.

Moore, a 1928 journalism graduate, is well recognized in the areas of journalism, advertising and public relations. She has been a prime mover in the development of communications in the trucking industry and from 1944-1976 was executive director of the National Truck Leasing System in Chicago. She is active in a variety of media and industrial groups and was named to the City of Chicago Senior Hall of Fame. Moore operates a management consulting firm from her home and will celebrate her 50th class reunion at Homecoming this fall.

Cox is founder and owner of the second largest advertising agency in Billings. Her business received the Advertising Excellence Award from the Billings Advertising and Sales Club for four consecutive years in the newspaper, television, radio and direct mail categories. She was named Montana's "Outstanding Young Woman" for 1974 and received national recognition in a 1976 Business Week magazine. She is serving as a delegate from Billings on the Alumni Board and in the past year has contributed many hours of her time, expertise and use of her agency to UM team visits and the Billings scholarship program.

Moy received his B.A. and M.A. in zoology in 1967 and 1969, respectively. He is an energy research coordinator for the Montana Energy Resource and Policy Office in Helena. Moy's work in energy alternatives can be seen in his design of a hot-air solar collector and an energy-conservative solar home as well as his membership in the Executive Committee of the Solar Planning Committee of Western Regional Solar Planning Effort, Helena Advisory Council. He is listed in Who's Who in the West.
